

Instructions:

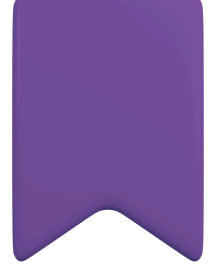

As part of your participation in the webinar “Building an Inclusive and Gender-Responsive BPSU”, you are required to submit a webinar reflection report. This will serve as both proof of attendance and a means to reflect on the insights gained from the event.

I. Your report should include the following:

Summary of the Webinar:

- Key points discussed
 - The webinar discussed two important laws in the Philippines: the Safe Spaces Act (Republic Act 11312) and the Magna Carta of Women. It focused on how the Safe Spaces Act helps prevent and tackle gender-based sexual harassment in everyday life, including in public places like streets and transportation, as well as online and at work. Participants learned that the law expands the definition of "public spaces" and lists behaviors that are not allowed, such as catcalling, staring, and groping. A key point was the law's focus on online harassment, including cyberstalking and doxing. The webinar also covered the Magna Carta of Women, highlighting its important rules that ensure women have equal rights in marriage and family matters, including property ownership and choices about family size. Overall, the discussion showed how these laws aim to create safer and fairer environments for everyone.
- Speakers and their messages
 - The information shared was both educational and empowering. The speakers reached out to the audience by explaining the important legal protections available against gender-based harassment and discrimination. They made it simple to understand what harassment looks like in real life and online. Their main message encouraged everyone to be aware, to speak up, and to take a stand against harassment. In the end, they inspired a commitment to help make our society safer and more welcoming for all.

Personal Reflection

- What did you learn from the webinar?

- I gained a much better understanding of the Safe Spaces Act and the Magna Carta of Women. While I knew a bit about these laws, the webinar really helped me learn more. I found out about the new definition of "public spaces" and the different actions like name-calling and online harassment like doxing that are now against the law. This has changed how I see harassment, showing me that it's not just about physical actions; it's also about treating people with respect in all areas of life, including online. I also learned more about the protections in the Magna Carta of Women, especially regarding equal rights in family matters, which really highlighted the importance of gender equality.

- How can you apply what you've learned to promote inclusivity and gender-responsiveness in your future career or daily life?

- I'm excited to use what I've learned in meaningful ways. As an observer, I'll be ready to spot harassment and take action or report it when it's safe to do so. I also want to share this knowledge with my friends and family so we can build a more aware and supportive community together. In my future job, I plan to stand up for a safe and inclusive workplace. I'll encourage my colleagues and bosses to follow the principles of the Safe Spaces Act, promoting the use of inclusive language and speaking out against any form of harassment. I also want to help create policies that treat everyone fairly. Ultimately, I want to use what I've learned to make the environment better and more respectful for everyone I meet.
